13 ORDER RE: COMPLAINANTS'
14 CONTACT INFORMATION
15

16 Re: Dkt. No. 96
17

18 Now pending before the Court is a discovery dispute joint letter regarding Plaintiff's
19 request for the contact information of three women who complained to Uber about the Uber driver
20 who assaulted Plaintiff. (Dkt. No. 96.) While Plaintiff has Uber's entire investigative file for each
21 complainant, Plaintiff contends that these witnesses may disclose additional, relevant information
22 concerning their interactions with Uber following their complaints about the Uber driver.
Recognizing the complainants' privacy interests, Plaintiff proposes that the Court utilize the Belaire opt-out process that is typically used in class actions. See Belaire-West Landscaping, Inc.
v. Superior Court, 149 Cal. App. 4th 554 (2007). After carefully considering the parties' submission and the relevant legal authority, the Court concludes that oral argument is unnecessary, see Civ. L.R. 7-1(b), and DENIES Plaintiff's request.

24 DISCUSSION
25

26 According to Plaintiff, in deciding whether to order an opt-out procedure for the disclosure
27 of putative class members' contact information, courts consider whether (1) the putative class 28 members had already voluntarily given their contact information by submitting complaints, (2) the disclosure of contact information does not involve a serious invasion of privacy, and (3) allowing one party the benefit of the contact information is unfair to the opposing party. (Dkt. No. 96 at 3

1 (citing Pioneer Electronics (USA), Inc. v. Superior Court, 40 Cal.4th 360 (2007).) Plaintiff
 2 contends these factors dictate allowing disclosure of the complainants' contact information with an
 3 opt-out procedure because the women voluntarily made complaints about the driver to Uber, the 4 opt-out process protects their privacy interests, and it would be unfair to allow Uber to have 5 exclusive possession of their contact information. The Court is unpersuaded that the limited
 6 probative value of the discovery sought outweighs the privacy interests of the complainants.

7 First, the Court rejects equating complaining about, for example, DVD players, see
 8 Pioneer, 40 Cal. 4th at 364, with complaining about a sexual assault or attempted sexual assault.
 9 As the "Me Too" movement has revealed, victims of sexual misconduct are often reluctant to 10 complain. Holding that because the victims complained about the driver to Uber their expectation 11 of privacy is less ignores the nature of the conduct about which they are complaining and would 12 potentially discourage future victims from making complaints. Further, this is not a consumer
 13 class action; there is nothing to suggest that by complaining to Uber they expected that they would 14 be contacted by an attorney for a third party to help with that third party's lawsuit.

15 Second, disclosure of the contact information would involve a serious invasion of privacy
 16 given the nature of the complaints. These women complained about sexually abusive conduct and,
 17 as far as the record shows, have not gone public with their experiences. Indeed, Plaintiff herself is 18 proceeding in this action under a pseudonym. These circumstances are not even close to the cases
 19 in which Belaire notices are typically given—wage and hour and consumer class actions. See,
 20 e.g., Aldapa v. Fowler Packing Company Inc., 310 F.R.D. 583, 588 (E.D. Cal. 2015) (putative 21 wage and hour class action filed by seasonal agricultural workers); Nguyen v. Baxter Healthcare 22 Corp., 275 F.R.D. 503, 512 (C.D. Cal. 2011) (putative wage and hour class action filed by 23 manufacturing employees). Given the serious invasion of privacy, an opt-out process does not 24 sufficiently protect the complainants' privacy interests because they may not receive or read 25 whatever notice is sent to them.

26 Third, this case is unlike a putative class action where an employer has access to 27 employee/class members and without a Belaire notice the plaintiff is deprived of equal access to 28 employees. There is no suggestion in the record that Uber is using these complainants as witnesses in this case such that it would be unfair to not share the complainants' contact information with Uber.

CONCLUSION

For all these reasons, Plaintiff's request that the Court order disclosure of the complainants' identities and contact information through an opt-out process is DENIED.

This Order disposes of Docket No. 96.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
